Foreword

A "happening" is usually associated with a non-conformist or possibly a "hippie" movement.

Each "happening" pictured and described in this book is an important part in the development of an over-all, well rounded, comprehensive education. Each of these events has taught us a lesson in life. Some lessons have been very small; some have been large. We have learned to win modestly and lose gracefully, to make friends, and to profit from our experiences in our daily classes and other little experiences that aided in the process of preparing us to face the complex world that is waiting for us. The class of '68 realizes the implications of these "happening" and is using them to full advantage.

All these events have led to the biggest and most important "happening" of all--Graduation. This is the culmination of all the "happenings" that have built the strong foundation for our immediate lives ahead, may they be in college, technical school, or the working force.

Mr. Rohrback Completes Sixth Year As Supervising Principal At C. W.

To the Class of 1968:

The "time line" is one of the techniques used by teachers to help you keep historical eras and events in proper perspective. Future generations will probably study historical time lines showing that the years you have spent in high school are part of an era of significant social evolution. You have observed all around you such extremes of conduct, speech, dress, politics, and religion that you were not only shocked but also confused as you searched for a personal philosophy which would provide the guidelines by which you would live your lives now and in the future. Your class philosophy as expressed in the introduction to this year's WEICON indicates you have used increasingly mature judgment in rejecting extremes of all kinds in order to secure a well-rounded education and a high school diploma.

Although it is not possible for me to know personally every member of a graduating class, I have followed with both interest and concern your growth as individuals and as a class for quite a number of years. Your faculty and administration have many times been pleased and gratified as you have risen not only to outstanding personal achievement but also to opportunities which helped to make your school one you soon call your Alma Mater.

Best wishes for a successful and rewarding future!

Sincerely,

Walter A. Rohrbach

Walter A. Rohrbach, Supervising Principal

Team Effort Of Administrators Creates Fine "School Spirit"

In the process of education, people learn to react to new experiences. Their reactions are based upon their associations and past experiences. Each young and beautiful being shapes around it events that are themselves young, beautiful and happy. As we mature in life we are constantly acting with and reacting to our environment, enabling us to continue to shape events that are young, beautiful and happy. We hope that we have provided all seniors with many "happenings" so that their environment has been enriched with a comprehensive education which will help and guide the class of 1968 along the road to success.

Terry W. Reber
High School Principal

Congratulations to the senior class upon graduation from our high school. We wish each one success and happiness in all future endeavors. We hope you will do your best in whatever the undertaking. Steer your life course so that events will not just happen; but try defensive steering to avoid the shortcomings of others. Do not dodge life--face it. Dodging happenings will not regulate them. By facing, by correcting, and by improving these happenings you will make your niche in history.

Norman B. Dinger
Ass't. H. S. Principal

The "happenings" in your curriculum
should have educated you
to adjust to those elements of environment that are of concern in modern life
and to develop, organize and train your powers
so that you may make efficient use of them.

The over-all, well-rounded education that was embedded in your curriculum is the realization of the ideal personality.

The ideal product of the educational process is a balanced personality - - - one whose body is the servant of his will carrying into effect the behests of a trained intelligence and the requirements of a scrupulous conscience.

Best wished for the implementation into your life and into modern society
the positive "happenings"
that you will need to use for future progress.

Triangular English Program Enjoys Continued Success

The triangular English program is designed to prepare the academic seniors and juniors in the three areas of English in which strength is especially needed for success in college. The literature of the program stresses the historical background of each period in literature and the relationship of history to the writing of that particular period. The principal authors are studied and examples of their writings are read and analyzed. In composition the pupils are taught the fundamentals of writing, and complete daily assignments in the various types of writing. The third area reviews grammar and mechanics and places a special emphasis on vocabulary enrichment. The effectiveness of the program is shown by the increased success and added interest shown by most of the pupils who enter college.

The trianglular English teachers include Mr. Gruber, grammar; Mrs. Winter, composition; and Mr. Shaner, literature.

In the past year many new teachers have come and gone in Weiser's English Dept. In Sept. Miss Linda Snyder assumed 10th grade teaching duties. Mrs. Froelich returned from a year's retirement, but retired again in December, and was replaced temporarily by Mrs. Ducar, Miss Frey became permanent 8th grade teacher in Jan. when Mrs. Ducar left. Mr. Jenkins served as 7th and 9th grade teacher as well as Weicon advisor. Other teachers included Mrs. Weidner, 7th grade; Mrs. Laffredo, 10th grade; Mr. Henderson, 9th grade; and Miss Nagle, 9th grade.

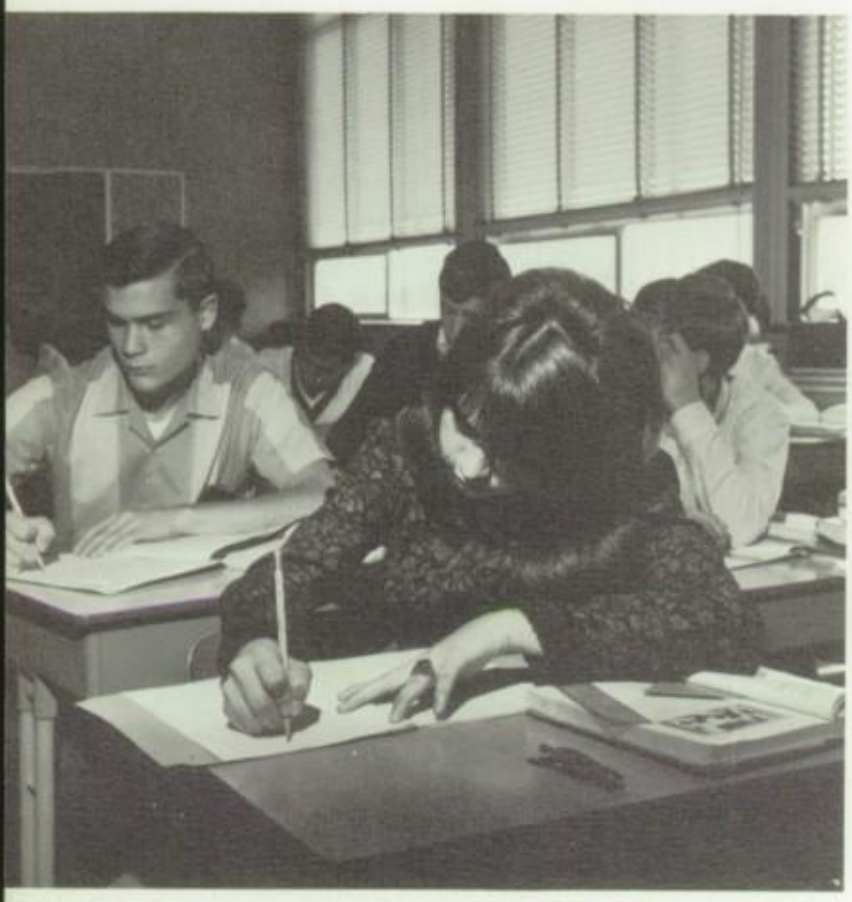
C.W. Math Curriculum Continues Top Rating.

All Students Get A Wide Variety Of Experience.

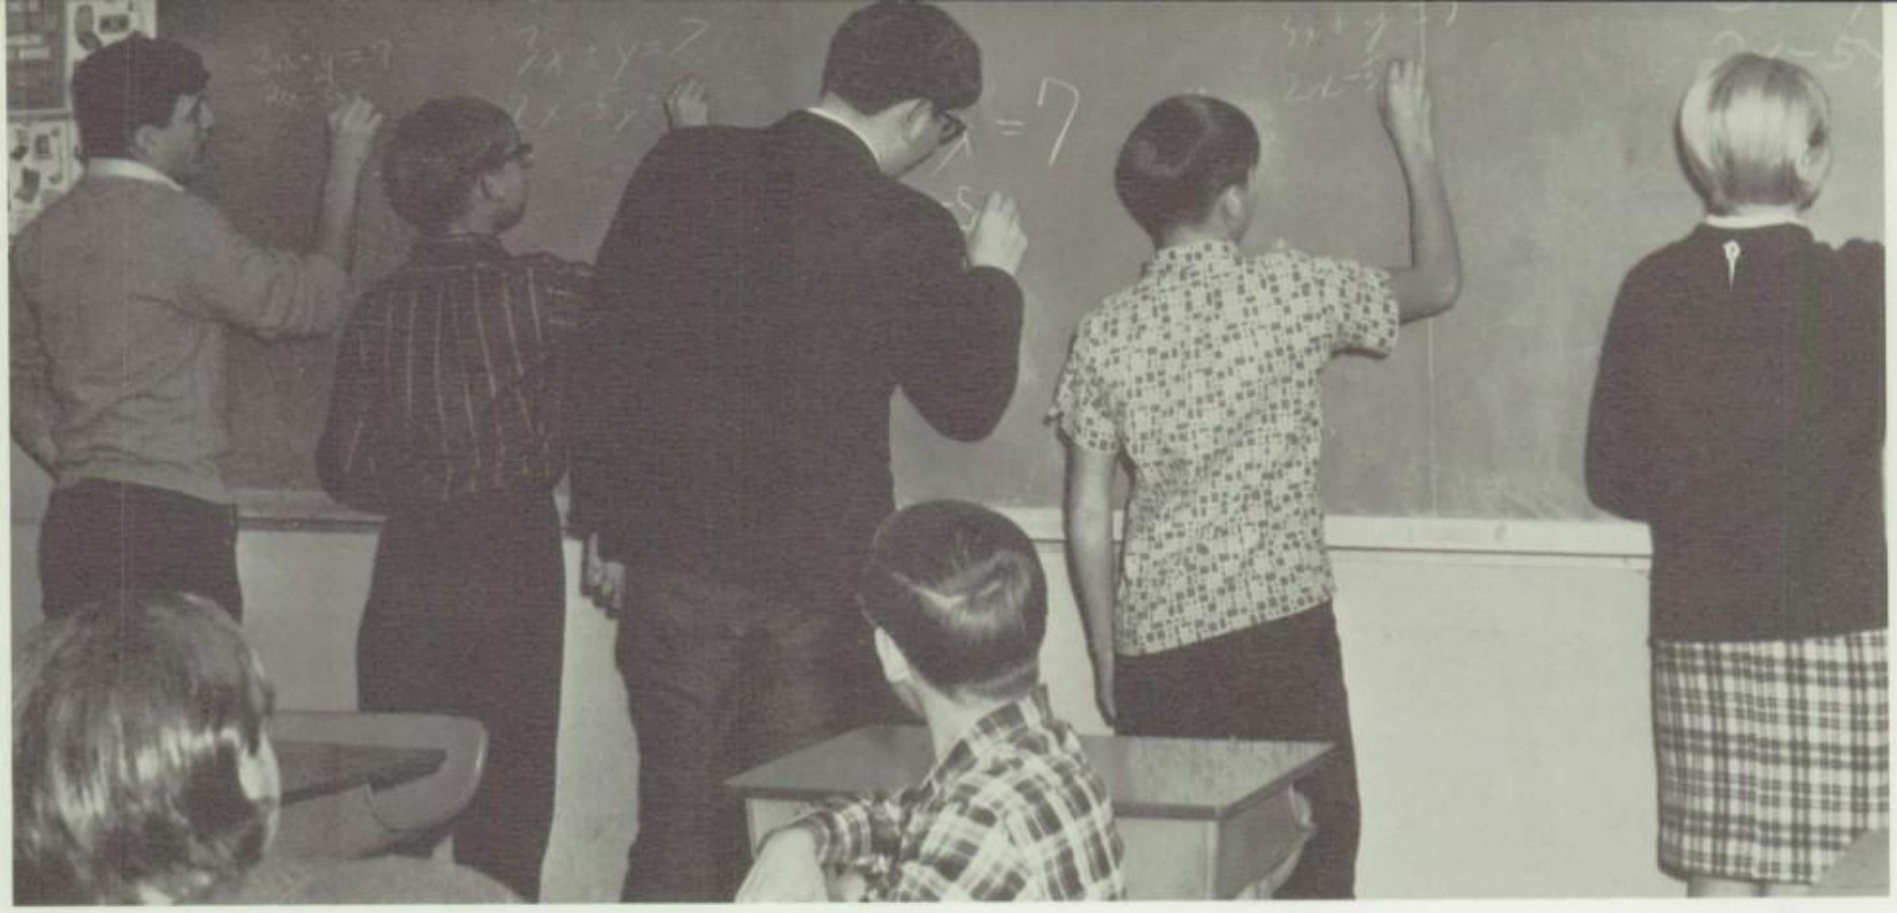
Mathematics is a major part of our curriculum. Students are first taught basic principles and mechanics. During the following years they are introduced to new fields and new ideas, making well-balanced students in math.

Mathematics is often called "the language of science" and rightly so. Scientists make theories, but use mathematics to utilize their principles. Therefore, math isn't confined to the classroom, but has its uses in other fields as well and can be applied to many problems in life which our students will face in the future.



Mel Mack and Rick Marderness diligently record Mr. Hess's geometry notes.

Senior trig. students find their homework requires concentration.



Mrs. Dinsmore's 9th grade algebra students gain experience by doing problems at the board.

"Make that line accurate," says L. Gelsinger to S. Leas and V. Moyer.

"Call on Me, Mrs. Keppley," states the eager expression and raised hand of B. Dunkelberger.

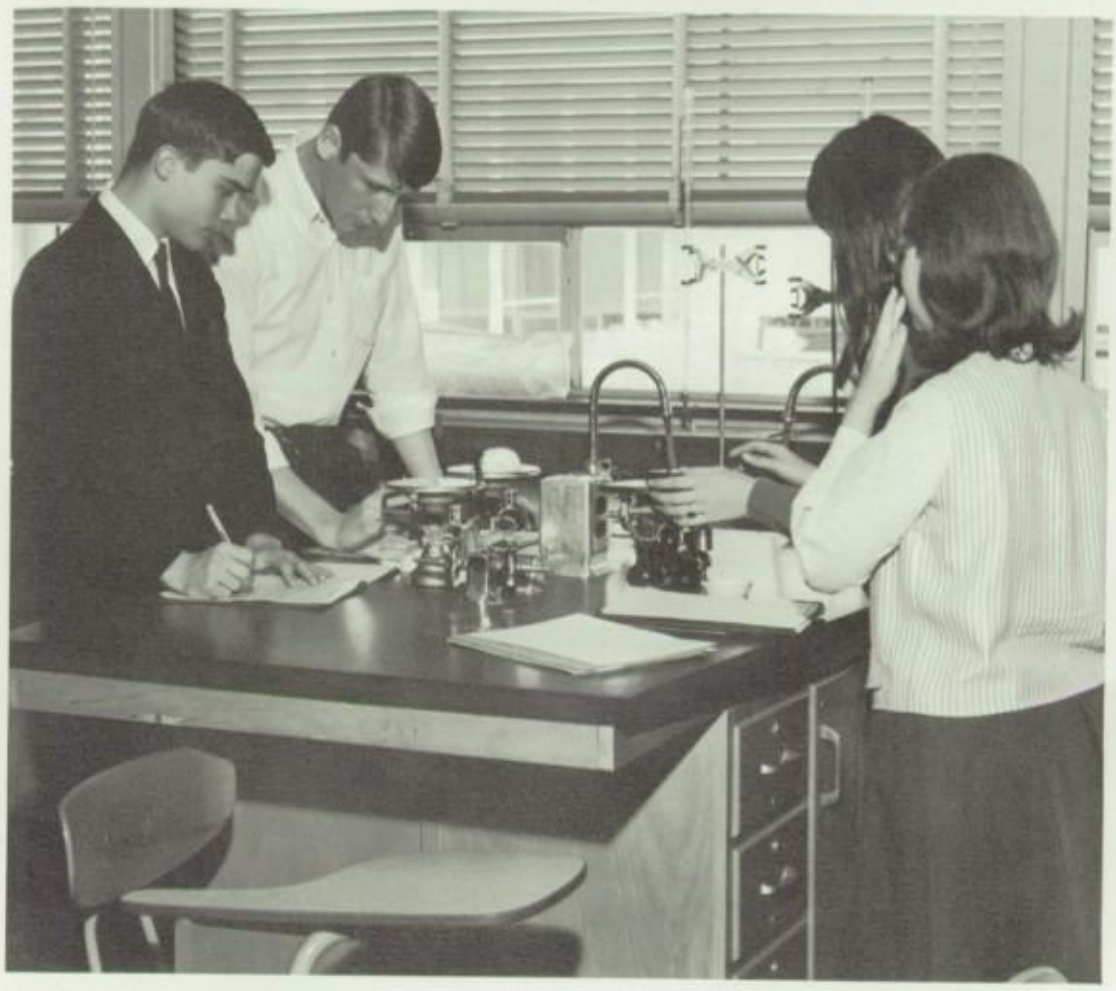
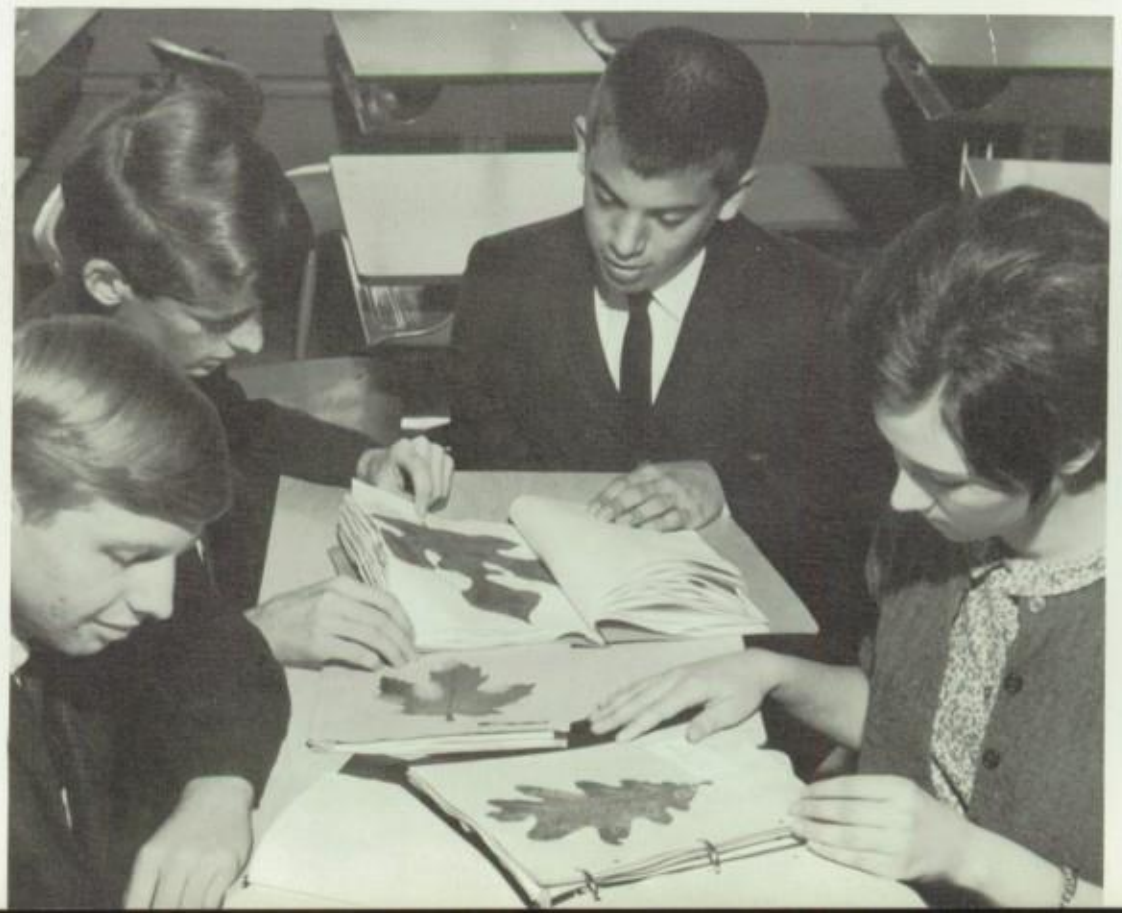
Steve says, "This is fascinating, isn't it?"

Weighing is an important part of chemistry lab.



Everyone wants to hold Balboa.

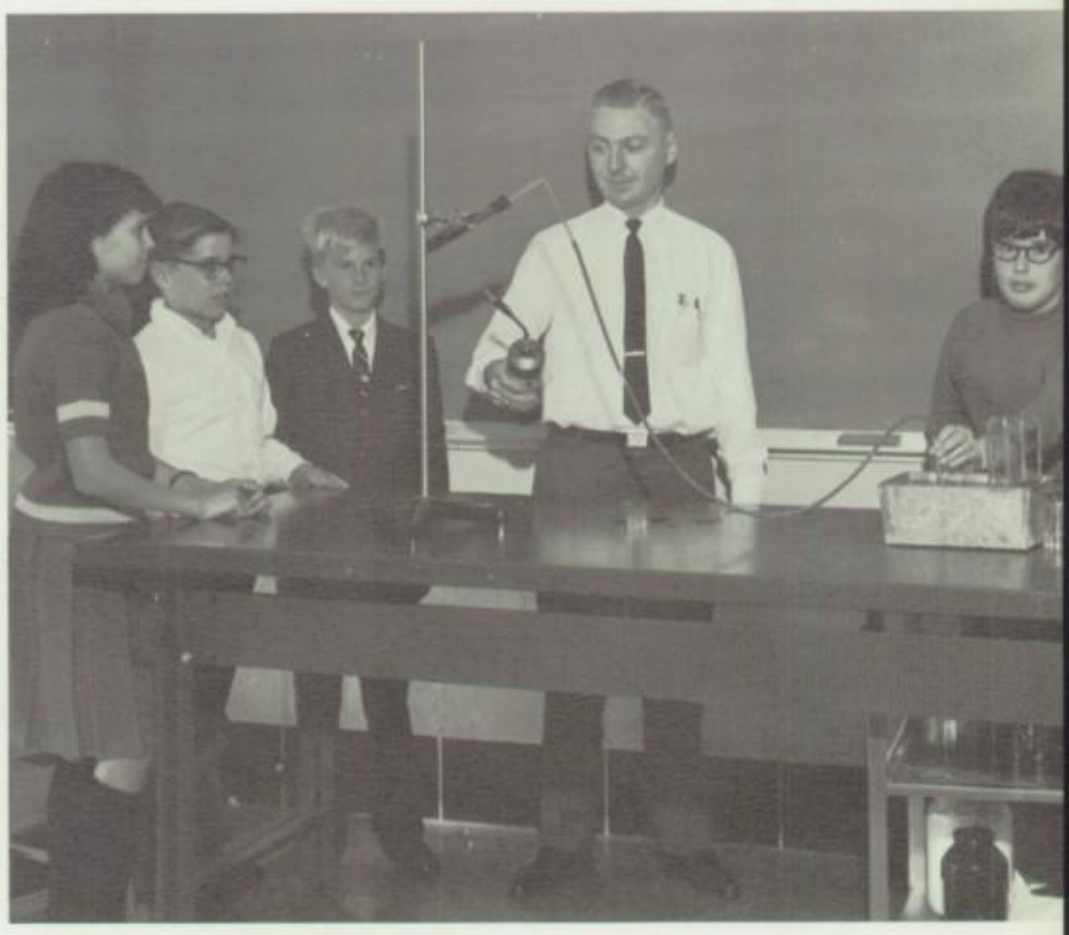


Mr. Breininger requires a leaf collection of his biology students each year.

The Science Department Aims At Knowledge Through Doing

In this technological age, science is becoming increasingly more important. Weiser's curriculum provides for a more than sufficient background in physics, chemistry, biology and general science. Knowledge through doing permits each student to utilize what he has learned by putting it to practical use.

Astronomy is just one area covered by this 8th grade class during the year.



Mr. Gosch demonstrates a basic experiment, the displacement of water by a gas, to each of his 7th grade classes.

Current science is an important part of the science curriculum.

Instruction isn't always confined to the classroom as these 9th grade students have found out.

Classes Stress Well Rounded Approach To History

The significance of history------

The fact that man has culture is one of the primary characteristics which distinguishes him from other members of the animal kingdom.

In order to understand man and how he functions the way he does in his environment we need to examine his culture. The cultural aspects of man, integrated with an analysis of his hisotrical development in Europe, Asia, Africa and the Americas will serve to expand the boundaries of man's knowledge of himself, the geographic controls upon his life, and ultimately create a betterenvironment for all.

The aim of the Social Studies Department is to have Conrad Weiser graduates prepared to take their place in society, prepared to do critical thinking on major issues that face our nation and to understand the social, political, and economic factors that influence our lives.

Students Gain Music Appreciation

Music classes for our junior high students present a basic background of the fundamentals of reading and writing music, the uses of the many musical instruments, the history of our own folk music, and the background and masterpieces of the famous composers. The objective is to provide the students with an appreciation and an understanding of our rich musical heritage.

The many choral groups provide varied opportunities and rewarding experiences for the student who enjoys singing.

9th grade music students are busily studying various musical symbols and their functions.

L. Gelsinger demonstrates her ability on the piano for the enjoyment of R. Sweigart, C. DeLong, and S. Lord.

M. George learns the use of accents in musical composition.

"Since there are four beats to a measure, G is a half note," says J. White to K. Dorman.

The Library—Storehouse Of Knowledge

To most people, the library is merely a place to obtain information for reports, borrow books, read magazines or incur fines for overdue books. However, the Library is really much more. The variety of books available here, both for reference and for light reading is a means of adding to one's store of knowledge and of broadening one's horizons. Many of the books and magazines give one a chance to read about new advances in many areas of special interest. There are magazines here which are not found in every home. These give one the opportunity to contact widely varying viewpoints, many of which are not in our local area. On the whole the library is a small cross-section of the world at large, where each student may sample that world.

Guidance Counseling Provides Aid For Students

Our guidance department is here to benefit our students. Here students receive assistance with their problems. An important role of the guidance department is to prepare a student for the future. Through various aptitude tests, counselors find in what areas a student excels. Whether a student wants a job, go to trade school, go to college, or join the service, our guidance department is only too willing to help.

Mrs. Krott and Mrs. Lahr discuss R. Wyatt's student record with him while F. Brossman and F. Miller await their turn.

"I choose the Berks Campus of Penn State," says S. Ulrich excitedly to Mrs. Krott.

Driver Education Prepares Our Drivers Of The Future

On the road training is an important part of the course for P. Texter and K. Buchter.

With all the cars on our highway today, driver education is essential. What better place is there to present this than in the school? The basics of good driving habits and highway safety rules and regulations are taught in the classroom. An on the road training course is provided to familiarize the students with the proper use of an automobile. With all this training it is hoped that we can make our highway safer in the future.

Each year Herb Motors provides Conrad Weiser with a car for driver training.
